

Moving Faith Formation Online - Updated

John Roberto

Many churches have cancelled gathered faith formation programs (and even Sunday worship) to prevent the spread of the Coronavirus in their communities. But that doesn't mean faith formation needs to stop. One way we can respond is to move faith formation online and into people's homes and personal lives.

On Vibrant Faith Catalyst there is a new Toolkit: Moving Faith Formation Online with the video and PowerPoint from the webinar; and tools, resources, videos, examples, links to websites to help you develop faith formation online. <https://vibrant-faith-catalyst.mn.co/courses/2037138/content>

Digital Tools for Online Programming

You will need a few digital tools to make online programming effective. Here are a few essentials:

- Website: A website provides a stable platform to develop online learning programs for children, youth, adults, and families - with activities, resources, videos, and/or podcasts. Create special pages on your church's website or create a special website for online faith formation. One of the easiest tools for creating a website for online programming is Weebly.com (<https://www.weebly.com>). They have a basic plan that is free (you can always upgrade if you need it). Weebly makes it easy to create webpages with learning programs. Weebly will host your site and provide a free domain name.
- Video Conferencing & Streaming: Zoom (<https://zoom.us>) provides is an easy, reliable cloud platform for video and audio conferencing, collaboration, chat, and webinars across mobile devices, desktops, telephones, and room systems. You can use Zoom to live stream worship, programs, presentations, etc. You can use Zoom to organize online interactive classes, small group studies (Bible study online), and much more. Facebook Live (<https://www.facebook.com/facebookmedia/solutions/facebook-live>) provides an excellent way to live stream worship, events, and presentations. Zoom and Facebook Live allow you to record the event for future use.
- E-Newsletter: Create a weekly e-newsletter with the learning activities for the week. Use you church's email or use an online email service like MailChimp (<https://mailchimp.com>) or ConstantContact (<https://www.constantcontact.com>). MailChimp is free for up to 2000 names. ConstantContact is $20 per month for up to 500 and $45 per month for 501-2500 (there is also a nonprofit discount).

- Texting: Use texting to send reminders and links to activities on the faith formation website. There are a variety of texting apps (free) that you can use with iOS and Android. Check out GroupMe – app and web-based interface (<https://groupme.com/en-US>), Telegram—app and web-based interface (<https://telegram.org>), WhatsApp (<https://www.whatsapp.com>), and Viber (<https://www.viber.com>).
- Facebook Group: Organize Facebook Groups that are targeted to the audience for each of your online programs. You can organize groups for adults to discuss the Sunday Scripture readings or to share insights from an online Bible study or theology course. You can organize groups for parents to share their family experiences with the Bible story of the week or prayer practice.
- Online Learning Platform: There are members of your church (such as a teacher) who have experience in using online learning platforms like Edmodo (<https://new.edmodo.com>). Edmodo is free for individual teachers and classes. An online learning platform provides a way to connect children and youth (and parents) with teachers/leaders and the content in a safe environment. This can provide a long-term format for blending gathered and online learning. Google Classroom (https://edu.google.com/products/classroom/?modal_active=none) helps students and teachers organize assignments, boost collaboration, and foster better communication. Google Classroom is a free web service, developed by Google for schools, that aims to simplify creating, distributing, and grading assignments in a paperless way. The primary purpose of Google Classroom is to streamline the process of sharing files between teachers and students.

Strategies for Online Programming

Here are a few ideas to help you think about how to organize online programming for the people in your church. Since it's online you might want to partner with other churches in your area to develop the digital platform and curate the resources.

1. Redesign your gathered program into an online program. Use the lesson plans or program designs you already have and redesign them into self-directed online learning sessions for individual or family use. You can publish these sessions on a website or use a learning platform like Edmodo. You can also create a Facebook Group for interaction and discussion.
2. Focus on the Sunday Scripture readings and/or the church year season. There is an abundance of resources on the Sunday readings that would make it easy to develop a webpage for each Sunday with the readings, a video, a podcast, and activities for different age groups.
3. Develop a weekly theme or focus for the online program. This could take the form of a “Bible Story of the Week” or a “Christian Practice of the Week.” Develop a webpage with the content (print, audio, video) and activities for the week.
4. Develop online mini-courses. This could take the form of a short course on prayer practices (varieties of ways to pray) or the study of a book of the Bible (pick a book with lots of online resources like the Gospels) or an exploration of social justice issues (lots of video and websites to explore different issues).
5. Use live streaming for presentations or a mini-course: Offer a presentation or course online via streaming that is delivered to people at home. The guest presenter and the host are the only people online while everyone watches on their laptop, tablet, or television. People can ask questions via a chat box. Live streaming can be used for all age groups. You can use Zoom video conferencing (<https://zoom.us>), which is free for a 40 minute session, or Facebook Live (<https://www.facebook.com/facebookmedia/solutions/facebook-live>), also free.

6. Provide a variety of resources for independent learning. There are so many online programs that we can offer people, especially adults. Develop a webpage for self-directed independent learning with courses from seminaries, universities, websites, etc.

Online Resources

I have selected a variety of great resources that are either free or low cost that you can use to develop online faith formation programming for all ages in your faith community. Many of these resources can be utilized to provide weekly faith formation for all ages in your faith community. If you are using a published program or textbook from a Christian publisher, be sure to check-out their website for online learning resources. Several publishers have produced digital versions of their textbooks.

A good resource for keeping up to date on faith formation resources is the Building Faith blog and website from the Center for Ministry of Teaching. Building Faith offers practical resources for ministry with children, youth, and adults with articles, advice, reviews, features, and resources for Christian formation with people of all ages.
